The RBI has on its part since the beginning of the pandemic has increased the liquidity in the economy significantly by keeping the interest rates at an all-time low level. This has increased the currency with the public substantially and credit especially to retail sector has improved and now since the past couple of months the credit to Industry & Services is also showing growth. However, since May as the RBI started tightening and the same is reflected in currency with public.

The PMI has largely remained in the expansion zone since the past year, which is reflecting steadily in the industrial production.

While WPI remained in the double digit since the past 14 consecutive month; CPI remained above the upper threshold limit of RBI for the fifth consecutive month in May.

GST collection have been touching all time high on the back collection efficiencies & pick up in business activity.

In June both exports and imports grew at a steady pace even as trade deficit widened. Further the forex reserve has also depleted as RBI continued to support the currency.

Double digit growth was displayed in Petroleum consumption, electricity generation and freight air traffic
